

The Blue Tree Project

Building mentally fit communities

Blue Tree Project is a mental health charity that flourished from a grass-roots movement in regional Western Australia. Our mission is to help spark difficult conversations and break down the stigma of mental health, by giving dead trees “a blue lease on life”. To date, over 1,000+ trees have been painted blue across Australia and other parts of the world, becoming conversation starters and symbols of hope for many. The visual reminders (blue trees) help individuals check in with their loved ones and mates going through a hard time, as well as using it to reflect on self-health.

Help raise awareness and reduce the stigma associated with mental health.

Coorong District Council, in conjunction with Coorong Conversations Matter have created powder coated trees that can be displayed on your front gates, fences, in your gardens, in your business and on your front counters or desk.

Funds raises will be split between Coorong Conversation Matter and the Blue tree project to assist with the delivery of programs, events and activities that address mental health and suicide prevention.
